Stores	Comments
Windstone Editions (of course)	There have been countless positive comments about the service and how Susie, the person in charge of the store, goes out of her way to help. She has been so welcoming to me; so helpful in suggesting Forum to find vintage pegasi. She pointed me to Forum which I have replaced my Hatching Pegs! She has been so helpful to me and always has excellent suggestions that has made me a satisfied as well as happy customer! She has spent valuable time with me forwarding links. When I purchased Female Griffin Copper Patina Version 2 I asked if someone to choose the most colorful, she said in searching the shelves she found a Version 1 which was more colorful. I ended up getting them both! She is always so friendly and truly cares about the customer; WE is most fortunate to have her!

Fritochick on Windstone Forum Frito Eiteuner on Facebook (Mary B. Eiteuner)	(March 2024) We recently did a trade I traded a test paint lap dragon for her test paint emperor dragon. She is a very nice lady and did an exceptional job wrapping and boxing the emperor. I was very concerned because she didn't have the original box and told me that I didn't need to send her a form fitted emperor box that I volunteered to ship to her. She assured me that she had already shipped several emperors without their boxes and all arrived safe and sound. Even after the Post Office delayed the expected delivery date, it arrived in perfect condition. I am very happy we did the trade and I have made a new friend. (March 2024) Mary contacted me to offer me her beloved Rainbow Emperor, "Ray", after she saw a Facebook post about my Rainbow Dragon Family. I was hesitant because I wasn't familiar with Mary and because she had approached me privately about the sale. Mary did not take offense to this at all. She then gave me several references from within the community (I did speak with one of them, a mutual friend, who only had good things to say about her). Mary also directed me to her positive feedback on eBay for further reassurance. She wanted to rehome Ray with me specifically because she felt that I would give him a good home, which I appreciated. At this point, I felt comfortable to proceed with the purchase. Ray was very reasonably priced, especially given his vintage and rarity. Mary disclosed (without me having asked) that Ray had suffered a toe injury and had been professionally repaired; she also gave me the name of the person who had done the repair, who I recognized from the Fan Page. Well, impossible for someone else maybe, but the uber-talented KoishiiKitty! She knocked it out of the ballpark! (May 2024) I made a purchase, and it was a perfect easy transaction. (June 2024) the following is NOT a feedback submission, but a general FYI to respect PYO artists and their work A situation arose where Kaelee was commissioned by a 3rd party to alter another artists finished PYO. It became clear after the alterations were made that the original artist was not consulted and had not given permission for this change and was not happy it was made. This is a notification to all PYO artists who are sensitive to alterations being made to their finished work. As a rule of thumb in the PYO artist community, altering another artist's work without their permission is generally viewed as strongly discouraged and we encourage collectors show our fellow artists the same respect as we do to Windstone and seek permission from the original artist whenever possible. Collabs can be wonderful, but only when both artists give consent. It should also be noted that some artists may not mind this at all, but it's always a good idea to ask permission as a general courtesy. Again, this is not a feedback submission and should not be taken for anything more than a general FYI per artist respect. Please also see the amended rules on the Windstone Editions Fan Club (Official) Facebook Group for PYO alterations are not allowed to be posted without the expressed permission of the original artist and proper credit given. Additionally, it also should be noted that Kaelee DID attempt to try and contact the original artist, but when she was not successful in her attempt through the Windstone Forum (by using the forum name that had signed the felt pad of the original piece). Only when the alterations had already been made did the original artist become aware via a Facebook inquiry.

Rylorien on Windstone Forum	The transaction went great. Rylorien was very helpful and sent me a lot of extra pictures when I requested them (the Classified Ad showed only an official Windstone Editions picture, but mentioned that others could be provided). Rylorien went out of the way to get me flash + no flash, indoor + outdoor photos, and when unable to do a comparison shot with a Tanzanite piece like I was hoping still sent me comparison shots with the closest color they had to Tanzanite! The financial side went well, too. I offered a choice of two payment methods and Rylorien was very prompt about letting me know that my payment had come through, and when the dragon went out! The dragon was shipped securely packed in its own Windstone box and made it safely to me. I had a perfect transaction with Rylorien, so they get a thumbs-up! Did a trade with this person. They were very good at communicating when their part of the trade was shipped and when my part of the trade arrived safely. I made several payments on an OW dragon to Rylorien. She was wonderful and easy to work with. She let me know that all the payments went thru as expected. Once the Dragon was paid off, she shipped him when she stated she would and he was well packaged in his form fitting box and double boxed. I would be willing to deal with her again. (May 2020) Good communication, prompt payment and shipping. Very polite and friendly member.

	(May 2024) I bought from Sarah twice. I wouldn't hesitate to buy from her again. Super nice person. (May 2024) Just completed a successful transaction with Sarah Newman. Item was perfect and packing was phenomenal. On a scale from 1 – 10 she gets a 30. (June 2024) the following is NOT a feedback submission, but a general FYI to respect PYO artists and their work A situation arose where Sarah Newman commissioned an artist to alter another artists finished PYO. It became clear after the alterations were made that the original artist was not consulted and had not given permission for this change and was not happy it was made. It then became evident that Sarah has commissioned alterations to be made on other artists finished works as well without gaining prior consent either. This is a notification to all PYO artists who are sensitive to alterations being made to their finished work. As a rule of thumb in the PYO artist community, altering another artist's work without their permission is strongly discouraged and we encourage collectors show our fellow artists the same respect as we do to Windstone and seek permission from the original artist whenever possible. Collabs can be wonderful, but only when both artists give consent. It should also be noted that some artists may not mind this at all, but it's always a good idea to ask permission as a general courtesy. Again, this is not a feedback submission and should not be taken for anything more than a general FYI per artist respect. Please also see the amended rules on the Windstone Editions Fan Club (Official) Facebook Group for PYO alterations are not allowed to be posted without the expressed permission of the original artist and proper credit given.

Sasha Miller on Facebook	(July 2024) After seeing Sasha’s amazing PYO Barong “Pond Guardian #1” posted on the FB Fan Page and already sold, I reached out to enquire about a commission. I wanted something similar, but personalized with some Japanese themes. Sasha suggested cherry blossoms (Sakura) on a green background for the saddle (I probably would have eventually thought of cherry blossoms, as they are very meaningful to me, but she beat me to it and suggested them first). I was very particular about the cherry blossoms, and sent Sasha some reference photos of what I wanted. Sasha spent many hours perfecting a whole bunch of pink to white ombre blossoms – very tiny and delicate, and outlined in gold (her idea), as well as loose petals blowing in the wind, as requested by me. She also added more stamens to the blossoms when I requested that. I’m not usually that picky, but I definitely had a vision in my head for the Sakura blossoms specifically. I asked Sasha if she could incorporate the Japanese kanji (word/character) for “love”, and sent her a photo of a brush painting of that kanji done by one of my students in Japan. When I had that same calligraphy done as a tattoo, the artist photocopied the painting and shrunk it down to size for the tattoo, so I figured Sasha would do the same thing, as the character is extremely intricate. She wasn’t able to do so because of the size, so she painted the kanji freehand, and it turned out perfectly! I was extremely impressed by that. She also suggested that the kanji be done in a pink to white ombre, outlined in gold, so that it would match the cherry blossoms. I had pictured it being done in solid black or gold, and I didn’t think her suggestion would work because of the size of the character. We agreed to try it as an experiment which could be painted over if it didn’t turn out. It did turn out – beautifully, and it looked much better than solid gold or black would have. Sasha communicated with me regularly, and sent updates (with photos) at every stage to get my feedback and to make sure I was happy with how the piece was progressing. Since I wasn’t initially sure about some of the design suggestions she made, I appreciated seeing those details and being able to collaborate on the piece. Every one of her aesthetic suggestions turned out to be spot on. Sasha also sent me photos of the Barong with three different eye colours so that I could choose the colour I liked best. I asked about naming the Barong “Sakura”, so Sasha signed her felt pad as

The piece was very reasonably priced considering the amount of time and labour that went into it. The piece was shipped very securely and arrived in perfect condition. When “Sakura” arrived and I took her out of the inner box, tears came to my eyes because she is absolutely exquisite and totally exceeded my (already high) expectations. Sasha is remarkably skilled at painting realistic details (ocean waves and koi fish) on a deeply textured surface (the Barong’s fur), as well as extremely tiny details and subtle shading, and she has a wonderful intuitive and creative design aesthetic. I would recommend Sasha without hesitation to anyone wanting to have a commission done.

Did a GB Young trade and she was fantastic and shipped promptly and had amazing communication. She was very easy to work with, had good communications, and helped me understand the normal process for trading grab bag dragons as this was my first time doing an exchange via the Windstone forums. The mini-keeper she sent me arrived in the original Windstone packing materials (bag, box, and outer box with packing peanuts), and was in perfect condition.
